* 10. In the image above you can see two options for the way that 'comments' will be displayed. If a user clicks on a post from one of the 'bots', a list of automatically generated comments will appear. Option one is a 'traditional' comment interface where comments appear below the original comment, and option two is less traditional comment interface, where comments appear below and to the right of the original comment. Which style do you prefer?

'Traditional' interface

'Non-traditional' interface

11. Why did you prefer the interface you chose? What do you see as the disadvantages of the other interface?

* 12. Do you think either interface would make it difficult for you to navigate away from the 'comment' page?

'Traditional' interface would be difficult to navigate away from

'Non-traditional' interface would be difficult to navigate away from

Neither interface would be difficult to navigate away from

13. Do you have any more thoughts or comments on any of the images given above? Do you have any ideas about how to improve the interfaces you have seen?

Fakebook is a website which is designed to emulate the experience of using a social networking website like Facebook or Twitter. However, rather than posts from real people, the site is populated with random comments created by bots. Users will have the ability to like and comment on posts, and to post themselves. Depending on factors like the time of day and whether you are posting about 'trending' topics, your posts will also get 'engagement' from the bots. This engagement is designed to keep you on the site for longer- except rather than keeping you on the site in order to advertise to you (as is the case with other social media sites) we're trying to capture your attention so that you are more likely to read our fact boxes about social media, create an interesting and entertaining platform to engage people in the conversation about social media. We will be adding more features to the site as we go. The next section is about 'extra' features to the site, and how useful you think they would be to help us accomplish our core aims (as described above).

* 14. Do you think it should be a priority for 'bots' to respond to real trending and viral topics? These topics will reflect what is actually trending on twitter that day.

The most important priority

A top priority, but not the most important

Not very important

Not important at all

* 15. Do you think it should be a priority for the 'bots' to respond to news articles, and possibly to be seen mimicking the spread of 'fake' news in their behaviour?

The most important priority

A top priority, but not the most important

Not very important

Not important at all

* 16. Do you think that it should be a priority for the 'bots' to be funny? A funny bot may be more likely to discuss inane topics and share nonsense opinions than to properly respond to trending topics or current events.

The most important priority

A top priority, but not the most important

Not very important

Not important at all

* 17. Do you think it should be a priority for the website to look as professional as possible and to emulate the 'seamless' experience of real social media sites?

The most important priority

A top priority, but not the most important

Not very important

Not important at all

* 18. Do you think it should be a priority for users to be able to create an 'account' on Fakebook and therefore keep a record of all of their comments and likes if they wanted to?

The most important priority

A top priority, but not the most important

Not very important

Not important at all

* 19. Do you think it should be a priority for users' comments to appear publicly? This means that if you post something to Fakebook, your comment could appear on somebody else's timeline. Your engagement could therefore come from real people as well as bots.

The most important priority

A top priority, but not the most important

Not very important

Not important at all

20. Do you have any more comments about the extended features? Are there any features you would like to see on the site that hasn't been mentioned?

21. What are your thoughts on the concept for the site as whole? What do you like, or not like?

22. If you would like to provide some feedback on the site in our next stage of testing, please include your name and email address below. If not, please feel free to skip this step and your feedback will be anonymous.
